

Homage to heritage

Kitchen remodel, family room/master suite addition, Minneapolis

The family who calls this south Minneapolis Tudor home left the suburbs for a residence in the city, closer to work and near good schools. To be ideal, it needed more space, including replacement of the small, outdated kitchen, and the addition of a master bath, achieved through a rear addition.

Once the location and exterior design of the addition was established, the interior pieces fell into place in a collaborative design effort between the owners, designer Judy Kirtz, and Transformed Tree partners Peter Hagen and Mel Salmi. The homeowners did extensive research to add period-authentic ideas to the design. The kitchen and old powder room were replaced with a beautiful new kitchen finished with period character cherry cabinetry. On the main level, the addition houses a new family room, powder bath, mudroom, and covered porch entry. Upstairs is what's now a master suite, thanks to the addition of a luxurious owners' bath.

Throughout the space, the Transformed Tree's custom woodwork matched the heritage of the home with unabashed flawlessness. "Everybody who looks at it is astounded," Hagen says. "It is impossible to tell which is old and which is new."
